

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to methods for treating neurogenic inflammation pain. The methods include administering an effective amount of a
5 composition which includes a botulinum toxin component and a substance P component to a patient, thereby treating the neurogenic inflammation pain.

205220-16928001